IN THE WAKE OF HURRICANE MATTHEW:

Flooding in Coastal Georgia raises concerns of potential pest problems

The heavy rains and subsequent flooding caused by Hurricane Matthew in early October produced a bumper crop of mosquitoes on Georgia's Coast. The Georgia Department of Agriculture is advising coastal residents to be aware of the equally heavy threat that termites can pose during this time of repair and rebuilding.

"This is a good time to ensure that the homes and buildings are protected against subterranean termites," said Georgia Agriculture Commissioner Gary W. Black.

The winds and storm surge generated by Hurricane Matthew along the Georgia coast destroyed many homes and businesses, and damaged many more. Soil-applied termite treatments protecting those structures prior to the storm may also have been disturbed. Owners of damaged structures should contact the pest management company that applied the treatment prior to the storm to determine if retreatment is needed.

Derrick Lastinger, program director of the department's structural pest division, said re-treatment will be needed if there is movement of the foundation or adjacent slabs such as patios or walkways. If repair work is done, soil in these areas should be treated. Any reconstruction of landscaping that disturbs the treated soil may also compromise the overall protection of the structure. If a termite baiting system was installed prior to the storm to protect the structure, then the pest management company that installed it should evaluate the condition of the stations and service them as needed.

Flooding that compromises the treatment also compromises any warranty the pest control company offered at the time of service, Lastinger said.

"This situation is unfortunate and neither the fault of the owner nor the pest management company," he said.

He urged property owners to review their termite control contracts to determine who is responsible for the reestablishment of the termite protection, which should be listed under the "terms and conditions" within the contract. If retreatment is necessary and the home is covered under flood insurance, the retreatment costs might be covered under that policy.

Consumers are urged to use licensed professional pest control companies. If a company is not licensed by the Georgia Department of Agriculture, it is illegal for them to practice termite control work. Consumers can find a list of all licensed professional pest management companies by visiting <http://agr.georgia.gov/structural> or by contacting the Structural Pest Section at 404.656.3641.

The Georgia Department of Agriculture has identified the following pests that are of the utmost concern in the wake of Hurricane Matthew:

Mosquitoes: Standing water is a major issue in the aftermath of a flood, as it provides the ideal breeding ground for mosquitoes. Residents should apply an insect repellent containing DEET, picaridin, IR3535 or oil of lemon eucalyptus when spending time outdoors to minimize the chance of being bit by a mosquito.

Flies: Filth flies are attracted to spoiled food items and overflowing sewage, both of which are common in the wake of a flood. This type of fly often lays its eggs in rotting organic material. Sanitation is crucial to prevent a fly infestation in the home.

Rodents: Rising waters force rodents nesting in sewer systems to seek refuge on higher ground. The delay in garbage pickup that many areas might experience from the flooding can attract rodents to the property. Homeowners should store trash in sealed plastic receptacles until clean-up is finished.

Termites: Any wood that may have come in contact with water will be attractive to termites. Homeowners in flooded areas should contact a licensed pest control professional to inspect their properties for signs of damage to existing termite protection measures.

Ants: Red imported fire ants form a ball that acts as a raft to survive floodwaters. People should be aware of these floating islands to avoid accidentally disturbing a nest, which could result in painful stings.

Like a good neighbor, Georgia will share

Georgia Agriculture Commissioner Gary Black, seated at left, listens as Gov. Nathan Deal speaks during the Willie B. Withers Sunbelt Ag Expo luncheon in Moultrie Oct. 18. "This continues to be a place that I look forward to visiting every year," Deal said. The Governor arrived at the expo two hours before the luncheon to stroll through the livestock barns and various exhibit halls. Among the most useful tchotchkes given out by the 1,200 exhibitors at the expo were handheld fans, which the Governor and hundreds of other luncheon attendees deployed against the gnats. "If you've not already done so, I urge you to visit the exhibit halls. As you visit those exhibit halls they're going to give you lots of paraphernalia, and sacks to put it in," Deal said. "I invite you to use those sacks to take as many of these gnats back home with you as you want. We are willing to share. We are a good neighbor." Read more about expo on Page 12.

Discovery of New World screwworm in Florida prompts advisory to animal owners

The Georgia Department of Agriculture is encouraging animal owners to carefully examine their pets and livestock for signs of screwworm. (Assistant State Veterinarian Dr. Janemarie Hennebelle explains the origins and symptoms of screwworm in a guest column on Page 6.) On Sept. 30, New World screwworm was found in wild deer and pets in the Florida Keys. New World screwworm has not been detected in Georgia.

In an effort to protect the health of the Georgia Animal Industry and to safely maintain animal movement, the Georgia Department of Agriculture instituted special health requirements for animals moving from Florida into Georgia. Animal screwworm special import requirements apply only to animals exiting the Florida Keys traveling to Georgia to remain for a period of time. They do not apply to animals transiting Georgia without stopping.

No permit number will be required.

All animals leaving the Screwworm Quarantined Area in the Florida Keys and traveling to Georgia will be required to:

- Obtain a Certificate of Veterinary Inspection (CVI or Health Certificate)
- Provide the following veterinary statement on the CVI: "The animals listed on this Certificate of Veterinary Inspection have been examined by me and found to be free of Screwworm."

Report suspicions or findings of screwworm to the Georgia Department of Agriculture by calling 404.656.3667 during business hours (8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Monday-Friday), or online using the Reportable Animal Disease Form found on the department's website at <http://agr.georgia.gov/animal-health.aspx>.

Advertise in the Market Bulletin

Classified advertisements in the Market Bulletin are free to subscribers and limited to one ad per issue per subscriber number. Out-of-state subscribers may only publish ads in the Out-of-State Wanted category. Advertisements from businesses, corporations, dealerships, real estate agents or other commercial entities are not permitted. Advertising is limited to farm-related items.

Advertisers and buyers are advised to be aware of state and federal laws governing the sale and transfer of live animals. The Georgia Department of Agriculture does not assume responsibility for transactions initiated through the Market Bulletin but will use every effort to prevent fraud. Advertisers are expected to fulfill the terms of their offers. Failure to do so through either negligence or intention may result in the suspension of advertising privileges.

Market Bulletin staff reserves the right to designate ad length and to edit for spelling, grammar and word count. Ads run a maximum of two consecutive issues if the category allows. A new ad must be submitted to run longer than two consecutive issues.

Ads in regularly published categories are limited to 20 words including name, address, email address and phone number. The following ad categories are published periodically and allow up to 30 words: Farm Services; Farm Services Wanted; Farmland Rent/Lease; Farmland Rent/Lease Wanted; Farmland for Sale; Handicrafts. Ads for Farmland for Sale are published twice per year, in the spring and the fall.

GUEST COLUMN: How to recognize infestations of screwworm in animals

By Dr. Janemarie Hennebelle, DVM, MPVM

Screwworm infestations result from maggots (blowfly larvae) that resemble wood screws. They are pointed at one end and blunt at the other end with rings of brown spines around their bodies. Screwworms feed on living tissue rather than dead tissue like other flies. There are two main types of screwworms: New World and Old World. Old World screwworms are larvae of the Chrysomya bezziana fly and are not found in the Western Hemisphere.

New World screwworms are caused by larvae of the fly Cochliomyia hominivorax and are normally found in tropical and semitropical areas of the Caribbean and South America. Other than isolated cases from imported animals, the United States has largely been free of self-sustaining New World screwworm populations since the 1960s.

The Pest and Its Cycle

Screwworms can infect any warm-blooded animal, including humans. Infestation occurs when a blowfly lands on the edge of a wound and deposits eggs. Larvae then enter the wound to feed for about five to seven days before dropping out of the wound onto the ground to continue development. The larvae bury into soil to pupate and emerge as flies from seven to 60 days later depending on warmth and humidity. Screwworms do not like freezing temperatures or extended periods of cold, dry weather. Once the flies emerge, the life cycle continues with males and females mating after about three to five days. Male flies will mate multiple times, but females usually mate only once. A male fly lives for about two weeks while a female can live anywhere from 10 to 30 days.

Signs of Screwworm Myiasis (infestation)

It is a good idea to observe your animals for wounds, particularly wounds that become infested with maggots. Screwworm larvae can enter wounds as small as a tick bite. It is common to find them around castration or dehorning sites, in the navels of newborn animals, in deer shedding velvet, etc. Wounds will often have an odor as well as a discharge that can be bloody.

Owners may notice their animals have a decrease in appetite, wish to be alone and separate from a herd or other animals, have decreased milk production, or general discomfort. If you notice any of these signs, talk to your veterinarian and he or she can evaluate your animal for screwworm infestation. Get them checked early because an infestation that goes untreated can result in very poor health and even death for animals.

Treatment and control

Fortunately, screwworm infestations respond to treatment, especially when caught early. An effective option is to treat wounds over several days with an approved chemical that kills the larvae. Applying topical insecticides to animals may protect them against screwworms for a period of time. Treatment should be repeated to ensure that all larvae are killed and no re-infestation occurs.

The best strategy is eradication of screwworm, something that is achievable, as demonstrated by earlier efforts in the United States that included releasing sterile flies so that mating cannot take place and the life cycle is interrupted. Through this process, the United States eradicated New World screwworms in this country by 1966. Now that they have returned to the Florida Keys, sterile flies are being released once again to eliminate this threat.

A veterinarian who wants to rule out a screwworm infestation should remove larvae from wounds using tweezers and place them in alcohol. Then contact the state veterinarian's office and a veterinary medical officer will arrange submission of the larvae for identification.

ARTY'S GARDEN: Are you talking or are you listening?

By Arty Schronce

The notion of talking to plants to help them grow was so faddish in the mid-1970s it was practically expected: If you love plants you talk to them. My family ran a greenhouse and nursery back then, and I remember being asked about it constantly.

We sold a lot of hanging baskets with petunias, geraniums and fuchsias that were popular gifts for Mother's Day. Sometimes customers would purchase them in advance and pick them up on the Saturday before. We marked these with the customer's first name. Upon seeing these tags, one customer exclaimed, "Oh, you must talk to your plants. I see you've given them names!"

I almost felt a little ashamed to admit I didn't talk to plants. I loved plants, but even though the years twixt 12 and 20 were often lonely I never felt the need to get chatty with a geranium. I didn't think the geranium would get much out of it either.

I thought more of the notion (also a fad at that time) that plants prefer one kind of music over another. A researcher conducted experiments on the effect of music on plants and concluded that playing various types of soothing music to plants was beneficial, while playing hard rock and dissonant music was detrimental.

Since I disliked hard rock and gravitated to ballads and music on the softer and more melodic side, I thought that both plants and I had better taste than most of my classmates. It's easy to embrace a concept that aligns with your point of view.

I even bought an album named "Music For Your Plants," which contained selections by Vivaldi, Mozart, Beethoven, Grieg, Mendelssohn and Tchaikovsky. (Naturally, Tchaikovsky was represented by "Waltz of the Flowers" from his Nutcracker Suite.) I enjoyed the album, but I never got around to playing it for any plants. I lost interest somewhere in the second movement of Mozart's Clarinet Concerto.

I think I had also begun to more fully realize that I had much more to gain by listening to my plants than by forcing them to listen to me, or even my music. Our tongues are not attached to our eyes, but our constant yacking does blind us at times. And the bombardment of music and news that was bad then is far worse now.

I remember seeing actor and art lover Vincent Price discussing promising young artists on a television show many years ago. One artist was a young man who was deaf. Mr. Price showed one of his works and said that the young man often painted "listening" paintings, "paintings of people listening, listening to a flower. ..." Mr. Price cupped his hand to his ear to demonstrate. That image has stuck with me.

I don't have much to say to my plants, at least not in words, but I am trying to listen. I think they have much to tell me.

Crop insurance deadline nears in Georgia

Pasture, rangeland, forage and apiculture producers need to make insurance decisions soon

VALDOSTA – The final date for Georgia forage, livestock and honey producers to apply for crop insurance coverage is Nov. 15. Current policyholders who wish to make changes to existing coverage also have until Nov. 15 to do so.

Acreage intended for grazing and haying is insurable under the USDA's pasture, rangeland and forage program, and colonies of bees are insurable under the apiculture program. The PRF and apiculture programs for 2017 are under the rainfall index insurance plan. Crop insurance provides protection against a loss in production due to a natural peril such as drought. Coverage is available for PRF and apiculture in numerous Georgia counties.

Information about these crop insurance programs and resources are available on the USDA Risk Management Agency's website. Producers and agents are encouraged to use this information to learn more about these programs and determine insurability.

The federal crop insurance program includes more than 118,000 coverage options for 543 varieties of crops, nearly doubling from the roughly 64,000 different coverage options that were available in 2009. The total crop insurance liability rose from $79.5 billion to $102.4 billion over the same period.

USDA estimates that 85 percent of planted acreage for major crops is now covered by crop insurance, while 73 percent of planted acreage for eligible specialty crops is covered. The number of acres covered by crop insurance increased from 264.7 million for 2009 to 297 million for 2015. Coverage for fruit, vegetables and other specialty crops alone has grown from 7.7 million acres in 2009 to nearly 8.3 million acres in 2015.

Producers are encouraged to visit their crop insurance agent soon to learn specific details for the 2017 crop year. A list of crop insurance agents is available at all USDA Service Centers and online at the Risk Management Agency Agent Locator. Producers can use the agency's cost estimator to get a premium amount estimate of insurance needs online. Learn more about crop insurance and the modern farm safety net at www.rma.usda.gov.

Georgia Farmers Market Association hosts conference for producers, market managers in December

ATLANTA - The Georgia Farmers Market Association is hosting its first “Food for Thought” conference at Gwinnett Technical College on December 1-2. This two-day event will focus on helping producers, market managers and farmers market enthusiasts propel the vision for their agriculture business forward.

“We are excited to bring this much needed event to the Atlanta metropolitan area. It’s our goal to help participants improve their impact by giving them tools and resources to help them succeed,” said Sagdrina Jalal, executive director of the association.

The conference will offer four workshop tracks that include discussions on sustainability, community engagement, health and wellbeing, and the cultural aspects of food production. Keynote speakers will hone in on those topics on each day of the conference. Derreck Kayongo, CEO of the National Center for Civil and Human Rights in Atlanta, will discuss global health and environmental sustainability. Jeff Manley, general manager of The Rock Ranch, will talk about agritourism in Georgia.

For information on the conference, visit the FFT Facebook event page and the Food For Thought page on mygeorgiamarket.org. Event sponsors include Southern SARE, Georgia Grown, STAG VETS, Ladies Homestead Gathering, Wholesome Wave of Georgia, Project Generation Gap, the Athens Land Trust and the West Georgia Farmers’ Cooperative.

The Georgia Farmers Market Association is an association of farmers markets, producers and other community organizations committed to improving access to healthy foods in Georgia. The association’s mission is to strengthen farmers markets and increase food access in communities across the state by providing guidance and tools to producers; technical assistance, resources and training to market management; and healthy food access and education to consumers.

Georgia Farm Bureau Foundation for Agriculture offers $60,500 in Ag scholarships

MACON – The Georgia Farm Bureau Foundation for Agriculture is offering up to $60,500 in scholarships to Georgia students pursuing a degree related to agriculture, veterinary medicine, family and consumer sciences or a related field.

Since 1959, the foundation has awarded scholarships to students entering college with plans to pursue a career in agriculture or family and consumer sciences. In 2016, the foundation expanded the scholarship program to offer scholarships to rising college juniors and seniors, technical college students and veterinary college students.

In 2017, Georgia Farm Bureau will award scholarships in the following four categories:

Scholarship for Agriculture – This scholarship is for high school students who plan to enter a college that is part of the University System of Georgia, Berry College or Emmanuel College during the 2017-2018 academic year to pursue an undergraduate degree in agricultural and environmental sciences, family and consumer sciences or a related agricultural field. The foundation will award five scholarships of $3,000 each and seven scholarships of $1,500 each.

Technical College Scholarship for Agriculture – This scholarship is for high school students who plan to enroll in a Georgia accredited technical college and major in an area of agriculture or an agriculturally related field of study. The foundation will award 10 scholarships of $1,000 each.

Rising College Junior/Senior Scholarship for Agriculture – This scholarship is for college students who have at least two semesters of college work remaining to receive an undergraduate degree from a unit of The University System of Georgia, Berry College or Emmanuel College and are majoring in agriculture and environmental sciences, family and consumer sciences or a related agriculture field. The foundation will award 10 scholarships of $2,000 each.

UGA College of Veterinary Medicine Scholarship – This scholarship is for students currently enrolled in the UGA Veterinary Medicine program specializing in large animal/food animal practice. The foundation will award two scholarships of $2,500 each.

“Agriculture needs young people to become equipped with the skills that a technical college or college education provides to meet agriculture’s growing technology and research needs,” said Georgia Farm Bureau President Gerald Long, who also chairs the foundation’s board of directors. “Georgia Farm Bureau wants to financially help students pursuing a career in agriculture who will be the future workforce and leaders of Georgia agriculture.”

The deadline to apply for all scholarships is Feb. 3, 2017. Applications and scholarship eligibility requirements may be obtained from county Farm Bureau offices across Georgia or downloaded at the GFB Foundation for Agriculture website at www.gfbfoundation.org.

Scholarship recipients will be announced in spring 2017, and the scholarships will be distributed in the summer of 2017.

Georgia Farm Bureau is the state’s largest general farm organization. Its volunteer members actively participate in local, district and state activities that promote agriculture awareness to their non-farming neighbors.

The GFB Foundation for Agriculture is a non-profit 501 (c) (3) corporation. Donations are tax-exempt. Georgia Farm Bureau is using the foundation to finance activities and educational materials designed to increase the agricultural literacy of Georgia residents. Donations may be made on the foundation website at <http://www.gfbfoundation.org>. Checks made payable to the GFB Foundation for Agriculture may be mailed to the foundation in care of Katie Gazda at P.O. Box 7068 Macon, GA 31209.

New Horse Stalls Open at A.H. Stephens State Park in Taliaferro County

CRAWFORDVILLE – Equestrians have a new reason to gallop over to A.H. Stephens State Park in Crawfordville. The park opened 20 new horse stalls with a ribbon-cutting ceremony Oct. 29. The new horse facility is adjacent to 10 existing stalls, and is near 21 miles of horse trails, 20 equestrian campsites and four cottages. The equestrian campground and stable area were designed to accommodate large trailers.

The trail fee is $10, with a $60 annual pass available. Stalls rent for $12 per night. Campsite rental fees begin at $21 and cottages at $125.

Located just off I-20 between Atlanta and Augusta, A.H. Stephens State Park offers four miles of walking trails, fishing lakes, kayak and stand-up paddleboard rental, bike rental, horseshoes, geocaching and a Civil War history museum.

The 1,177-acre park was formed on the farm of Alexander Hamilton Stephens, a lawyer who served as vice president of the Confederacy during the Civil War. He was twice elected to the U.S. House of Representatives after the war. He resigned his seat in the U.S. House after winning election as Governor of Georgia. He died four months after taking office.

Stephens’ home, Liberty Hall, has been restored to its 1875 style and is open to park visitors. For more information about the park or to make reservations, call 800.864.7275 or visit GeorgiaStateParks.org/AHStephens.

COOK GEORGIA GROWN: Muscadine Glazed Quail Quesadilla

Ingredients:

1 cup muscadine juice
6 Plantation Quail* boneless quail breasts
1 clove garlic, minced
2 Tbsps. olive oil
Salt & pepper
8 oz. cream cheese, softened
¼ cup chopped scallions
¼ cup muscadine reduction
6 tortillas
2 Tbsps. sunflower oil

Preparation:

In a small sauce pan, heat muscadine juice to a boil. Continue boiling until the liquid has reduced in half. Set aside.

Combine quail, garlic, oil, salt and pepper in a zip top bag. Refrigerate 30 minutes or overnight. Heat a grill pan to medium high. Grill quail 2-3 minutes on each side, brushing several times with muscadine reduction to glaze. Set aside to cool. When cool enough to touch, cut in thin slices.

Combine softened cream cheese in a small bowl with ¼ cup muscadine reduction and scallions, mixing well to combine.

To assemble: Lay tortillas out on a flat surface. Divide cream cheese mixture evenly among tortillas. Spread cream cheese to cover entire surface. Take quail and mix with a small amount of remaining reduction, then divide evenly among tortillas, placing on lower half only. Fold top half over bottom half.

Heat 1 tablespoon oil in a nonstick pan over medium heat. Cook tortillas two at a time on both sides until golden, 2-3 minutes. Cut in wedges and serve.

Serves 6.

39th Annual Sunbelt Ag Expo highlights hope for the future of agriculture in the South

By Amy H. Carter
Editor

The 39th Annual Sunbelt Agricultural Exposition proved that hope is the Southern farmer's No. 1 crop. Despite lingering drought conditions across the northern part of the region, crop damage from a pair of tropical storm systems in the south, an ongoing interstate water war among three states and depressed markets everywhere, more than 80,000 farmers and ranchers from several states traveled to Moultrie Oct. 18-20 to see and hear about the future of agriculture.

South Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Hugh Weathers represented that state's farmers, who've learned to expect disaster in October. In October 2015, a large subtropical storm system stalled off the coast and triggered flooding of historic proportions. This year, Hurricane Matthew deluged the state once again.

"If it's October, we have water," Weathers said. "That's why it's good to come to the expo, to see that there is life after floods."

The roster of 1,200 exhibitors at Sunbelt this year included 129 new businesses. Several unveiled new technologies and product lines.

"If our exhibitors do business, they're back year after year," said Chip Blalock, executive director of Sunbelt Ag Expo.

Reinke Manufacturing, based in Nebraska, is one company among many that invest in the show annually.

"It costs tens and hundreds of thousands of dollars to build our display," said Mike Mills, Southern territory manager for Reinke, "but without it we couldn't get the word out."

This year, the company brought a center pivot fitted with pink wheels to draw attention to breast cancer, a disease that affects men as well as women.

"One in every 100 breast cancer patients is a man," Mills said.

Each year at expo, the company collects about $4,000 in donations for breast cancer research through its "Finding a Cure is PIVOTAL" campaign.

East Georgia farmer John McCormick was recognized as Georgia's Swisher Sweets/Sunbelt Expo Georgia Farmer of the Year at the Willie B. Withers Sunbelt Ag Expo Luncheon on opening day. McCormick farms more than 1,000 acres near Sylvania.

Chip Blalock, left, executive director of the Sunbelt Ag Expo, congratulates John McCormick on being named Georgia's Farmer of the Year.

"It's a great honor to be chosen as the farmer of the year when there are so many out there that deserve the same honor that I got," he said. "I am very blessed to have achieved this and thankful to the farmers who helped me get it."

Georgia Gov. Nathan Deal told luncheon attendees that members of the General Assembly recognize the importance of nurturing the state's No. 1 industry. Known for his commitment to education, Deal addressed the educators and students of agriculture in the room specifically.

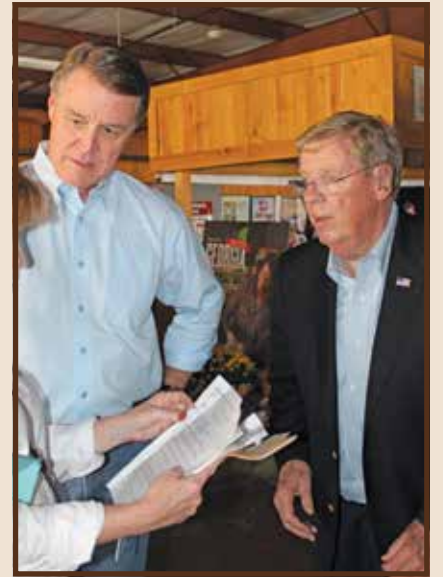

"You are a part of a great industry in Georgia," he said. "It is a $70 billion economic impact that agriculture and agribusiness has on our state. It is the number one leading component that has helped make our state – we are expecting for the fourth consecutive year something that no other state has ever received the distinction of for four consecutive years – to be the number one state in the nation in which to do business. And if agriculture is the number one industry in the state of Georgia, you can see where you rank in allowing us to attain that distinction."

Georgia Agriculture Commissioner Gary Black described agriculture as a "team sport" in Georgia, as evidenced by the attendance of state and national leaders at Sunbelt's opening day. In addition to Gov. Deal, U.S. Sens. Johnny Isakson and David Perdue visited, as did Secretary of State Brian Kemp and several members of the General Assembly. The presidents of several Southern land grant universities and colleges of agriculture were also there.

James Clements, president of Clemson University in South Carolina, described agriculture as the one industry that touches every life, be it with food, fiber or building materials.

"Without agriculture, none of us would be here today," he said. "We ought to all support agriculture all we can."

DROUGHT TAKES A TOLL: Southeastern cattle industry is suffering through a slump

Persistent drought conditions are forcing cattlemen in North Georgia to make significant reductions to their herds.

"I've been talking with a couple of cattlemen in Northwest Georgia and they have already started culling a fourth to a half of their herds because they're in such a bad drought situation," said Chris Prevatt, livestock and forage economist for the University of Florida. "A lot of them have been feeding hay since July and August. Hay supplies have been tight and they've had to make some hard decisions."

Prevatt presented a beef cattle industry forecast for 2017 at the Sunbelt Ag Expo in Moultrie Oct. 19. The crowd applauded his presentation at the end, but one farmer qualified his praise with the disclaimer that it was for the messenger, not the message. From drought to falling prices, the news was not good.

The U.S. Drought Monitor on Oct. 27 made note of deteriorating drought conditions in the Southeast, with North Georgia recording its driest 60-day period on record. Much of North Georgia now falls into the Extreme or Exceptional Drought categories, as defined by the U.S. Drought Monitor.

Drought conditions are forecast to persist in the Southeast through next July, Prevatt said. This coming winter is also forecast to be warmer than normal.

"Warmer than normal is not necessarily worse for us on the forage side of the situation, because we're going to get some temperatures that will allow us to grow some additional grass on some of those days that we wouldn't get the temperature high enough. The warmer than normal we can deal with, but the drier, that's going to be hurting us in the next six months," he said.

On top of that, auction prices are trending downward, ending nearly seven years of gains.

"At the top of this price cycle – in the 2013 to 2015 time period – we saw significant profits in the cattle industry," Prevatt said. "Currently we're in this downward price transition phase, and for a lot of people that's going to include some profits and losses, declining profitability overall. We've already started seeing that as these prices have significantly dipped lower. We're looking at 2018-2020 for that bottom of price cycle. There are some losses out there ahead of us unless there are some significant changes in the cattle industry going forward."

Market prices for feeder calves have fallen from a high of $289 per hundredweight in 2014 to a current low of $124.

"Now we're trading at a point we were at on Nov. 19, 2010," he said.

Slaughter steers coming out of the feed lots are selling in the $100-$110 per hundredweight range.

"Some of these feeder calves that are coming out of these stockyards are trading in about the same range as these slaughter animals that are coming out of the feed lot. Typically we don't see that," Prevatt said.

It could be a sign that slaughter steer prices will decline over the next year, he said. Because the market is not expected to hit bottom for another two to three years, Prevatt suggested that cattlemen start adjusting their business plans now.

"Overall the beef cattle industry in the Southeast is smaller compared to 2007. Just for example, in Georgia we have 80,000 head less today than we had in 2007," he said.

Alabama has 14,000 fewer head, South Carolina has 28,000 fewer and Florida has 35,000 fewer. In 2015 and 2016, the herd expanded slightly. Florida added 9,000 head of cattle in that time frame, and Georgia added 26,000. In North Georgia and North Alabama, where drought conditions are extreme, Prevatt said he expects those numbers to be significantly lower by the end of January.

"We really fell off a cliff there for the last year and a half. As we're still in this downward price transition, we have to manage our cost of production, our stocking rates," he said. "Our returns on variable cost are only $100 per head. That's really tight for those fixed costs for our barns, our machinery, equipment, our cow pens. How are we going to make that work? We've really got to work on managing our cost of production and get those costs lower as we move forward."
