UGA Ag Forecast seminars set for new year

By Merritt Melancon

The Georgia Ag Forecast seminar series will be held Jan. 30 through Feb. 7 at six sites across the state. University of Georgia agricultural economists will present insights into the latest market and regulatory conditions for the state's largest industry – agriculture.

Hosted by the UGA College of Agricultural and Environmental Sciences, the 2018 seminar series will be held in Athens, Bainbridge, Cartersville, Lyons, Macon and Tifton. Registration for the series is now open at georgiaagforecast.com.

More than 1,000 producers, agribusiness representatives and community leaders attended the seminars in 2017.

“The main objective of the Ag Forecast seminar series is to provide Georgia’s producers and agribusiness leaders with information on where we think the industry is headed in the upcoming year,” said Kent Wolfe, director of the UGA Center for Agribusiness and Economic Development. “It helps producers plan for the next year, but it’s also good for bankers and others who have businesses involved in agriculture or who will be impacted by the farm economy.”

Economists from the center and from the college’s department of agricultural and applied economics will deliver the economic outlook, which will focus on Georgia’s major commodities and the way that global markets, weather patterns and historical trends will affect them.

In addition to the economic outlook for 2018, attendees in Bainbridge, Lyons, Macon and Tifton will hear from Bob Redding of the Redding Firm in Washington, D.C. Redding will discuss major themes that may be addressed in the 2018 farm bill and moderate a discussion on the bill.

Wondering what to get your true love for Christmas?

The Market Bulletin has more than 12 days' worth of gifts.
By Georgia Agriculture Commissioner Gary W. Black

Merry Christmas to our Market Bulletin family. What a great year we have had celebrating The Bulletin's 100th Birthday! Thank you all for your support. Amy and her team work so hard every day to bring the best to you every two weeks.

We recently uncovered a morsel of history that I need to share as our gift to you this season. The fun and popular carol, “The Twelve Days of Christmas,” may actually have ties to the origins of The Bulletin. Yes, Virginia, it is true. While the song was originally published in 1780, the words placed to the tune we recognize today date to 1909, just eight years before Bulletin No. 1 rolled off the press. So how does this all fit together? Follow the logic.

Speaking in first person, the song’s author, Frederick Austin, tells of receiving a menagerie of gifts from his “true love” for 12 consecutive days. In order, from Day 1 to Day 12, they were:

1. Partridge in a Pear Tree	7. Swans a swimming
2. Turtle Doves	8. Maids a milking
3. French Hens	9. Ladies dancing
4. Calling Birds	10. Lords a leaping
5. Golden Rings	11. Pipers piping
6. Geese a laying	12. Drummers drumming

Hang with me here because this is important. In pre-social media Georgia, it probably took seven years for the song to register its popularity in the Peach State. (It’s notable that members of the Peach Commission still protest that they were not included in the lyrics.)

So, in 1916, all across Georgia, citizens wanted to demonstrate their affection to their loved ones in a similar fashion, but had no means to assemble such a diverse gift list. They voiced their concerns to Agriculture Commissioner J.J. Johnson and their state legislators, expressing their desire for a statewide publication to provide news and a one-stop shopping place for Christmas. The Bulletin was born in 1917. What about that?

So now, 100 years later, check out the Poultry/Fowl for Sale Section of our classified ads for Days 1, 2, 3, 4, 6 and 7. For Days 11 and 12, someone always has food-grade drums and irrigation pipe for sale in the Farm Supplies category. For Day 10, check out the Rabbits available from the Lord Family on Page 9. Days 8 and 9 are tough, but in the early days of the Bulletin – long before FarmersOnly.com – farmers submitted some very interesting “personal” ad postings. One from 1938 says a farmer is “looking for a sturdy woman able to pick up eggs.” To borrow a phrase from Forrest Gump, that’s all I got to say about that.

That leaves us with Day 5. I’ve never had a gold hay ring, but I’ll direct you to the Livestock Handling section for the usual colors. If you find five of them for sale there, you can always stop at Home Depot on the way home for a can of gold spray paint.

Thanks for letting me have a little fun. Lydia and I pray for God’s blessings on you this Christmas Season.

By Amy Carter

Agriculture touches every aspect of our lives, sometimes in the most unexpected ways. Like the day a story for the Market Bulletin took Kendall McWilliams and me to the front door of the Governor's Mansion, where we spent a nervous minute debating whether we should knock, ring the bell or just walk right in. We were expected, after all, and even passed muster with the State Trooper at the gate.

We were there to see the Georgia-grown Christmas tree featured in Kendall's story on Page 16. It's a fun, feel-good story about Georgia school children helping to decorate that tree with handmade ornaments spotlighting their home counties. The idea took shape during a conversation with our co-worker, Erin Burnett, whose nine-year-old sister, Mia, submitted an ornament on behalf of Mitchell County.

In the process of gathering facts for the story, Kendall was offered an interview with First Lady Sandra Deal. Suddenly, this fun little feel-good story became a rare and important opportunity with an accomplished and gracious woman. From the moment we walked in – after ringing the doorbell – until our departure nearly two hours later, Mrs. Deal treated us like we were dear friends just popping by for a visit.

I'm not ashamed to tell you that when Kendall and I left the Governor's Mansion, we were walking on air. As I said earlier, this business of telling the story of Georgia agriculture takes us to surprising places sometimes. It also introduces us to people we never dreamed we'd meet face-to-face.

I can only hope such opportunities will keep our awesome team of talented young women – Kendall, Erin and Leslie Davis – interested in making their careers in this industry. The USDA's most recent Census of Agriculture, compiled in 2012, counted more than three million farmers in America. Fewer than one million of them were women. I have scoured the internet looking for statistics regarding women like us who work in related roles supporting those farmers. If those numbers exist, they are not easy to find.

However, if I make inferences based on the amount of correspondence we receive addressed to "Gentlemen" and "Dear Sirs," we are an anomaly in the industry, if not actually then perceptually. We persevere regardless, and it is an appreciation for the importance of the work and the men and women who do it that drives us.

Kendall, who graduated earlier this year from the

Kendall McWilliams and First Lady Sandra Deal

University of Georgia's College of Agricultural and Environmental Sciences with a BSA in Agricultural Communication, initially considered majoring in business, pre-pharmacy or social studies education. She was moved to return to her roots after hearing classmates with no direct knowledge of agriculture propagate misconceptions about it.

"Agriculture is an integral part of my life and upbringing," she said. "I grew up rip-romping through pastures, riding in the cab of the tractor with my Daddy, and bottle-feeding calves when their mothers couldn't sustain them. I know, from experience, the beauty of agriculture because I've lived it. I was just a farm kid who was afforded the opportunity to receive an education from one of the best public universities in the country, and I figured the least I could do was get a degree in something I'm passionate about.

"Farmers don't yell from the rooftops about the importance of agriculture; it takes a field of communicators to preserve the reputation of this wonderful industry. In my career, I hope to promote the growth of the agriculture industry. I want to provide people with the insight and the information that will allow them to make educated decisions about their food. I want to give my all for an industry that has given so much to me, an industry that even helped me pay for that college degree. (Thanks Dad!)"

I'd say the future of agriculture is in good hands, wouldn't you?

2017 Census of Agriculture Is Underway Questionnaires being sent to more than 3 million U.S. producers

WASHINGTON – The U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Agricultural Statistics Service began mailing the 2017 Census of Agriculture to the nation's producers in late November. Conducted once every five years, the census aims to get a complete and accurate picture of American agriculture. The resulting data is used by farmers, ranchers, trade associations, researchers, policymakers and many others to help make decisions in community planning, farm assistance programs, technology development, farm advocacy, agribusiness setup, rural development and more.

"The Census of Agriculture is USDA's largest data collection endeavor, providing some of the most widely used statistics in the industry," said U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Sonny Perdue. "Collected in service to American agriculture since 1840, the census gives every producer the opportunity to be represented so that informed decisions can support their efforts to provide the world with food, fuel, feed and fiber. Every response matters."

The census will be mailed in several phases through Deember. Farm operations of all sizes which produced and sold – or normally would have sold – $1,000 or more of agricultural product in 2017 are included in the census. The census is the only source of uniform, comprehensive and impartial agriculture data for every state and county in the nation.

YOUR VOICE. YOUR FUTURE. YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

NASS revised the census forms in an attempt to document changes and emerging trends in the industry. Changes include a new question about military veteran status, expanded questions about food marketing practices, and questions about on-farm decision-making to help better capture the roles and contributions of beginning farmers, women farmers, and others involved in running a farm enterprise.

"Producers can respond to the census online or by mail. We highly recommend the updated online questionnaire. We heard what people wanted, and we made responding to the census easier than ever," said NASS Administrator Hubert Hamer. "The online questionnaire now has timesaving features, such as automatic calculations, and the convenience of being accessible on mobile and desktop devices."

The census response deadline is Feb. 5, 2018. Responding to the Census of Agriculture is required by law under Title 7 USC 2204(g) Public Law 105-113. The same law requires NASS to keep all information confidential, to use the data only for statistical purposes, and only publish in aggregate form to prevent disclosing the identity of any individual producer or farm operation. NASS will release the results of the census in February 2019.

Georgie's Drive through Santa Claus, Georgia

Hello! I'm Georgie, the Georgia Grown mascot. I travel the state promoting Georgia agriculture. In early November, I was headed to Lyons Upper Elementary for a Feed My School event and went through a town just south of Lyons on U.S. 1 called Santa Claus! I turned down Noel Street and found the city hall at 25 December Drive. I went inside and met Mrs. Sue, the town secretary. She told me that Santa Claus was incorporated in 1941 and people from all over Georgia bring her their Christmas cards each year to be stamped with the Santa Claus postmark. The streets in town are all named with Christmas themes, like Dasher, Dancer, Rudolph, Reindeer and Salem. The biggest business in town is a tractor dealership. So if you buy a tractor down there and your neighbor asks where it came from, you can say, "I got it from Santa Claus!" Before I left, Mrs. Sue invited my whole family to the annual Christmas tree lighting in town on the Thursday after Thanksgiving. After the school event that day, I rushed home and told my wife about us being invited to the tree lighting. She asked me if such a place really exists and I replied, "Yes, Georgina, there is a Santa Claus!"

FORECAST: Six events planned

Attendees in Athens and Carrollton will hear from Matt Hauer of the UGA Carl Vinson Institute of Government Applied Demography Program. This program provides state and local leaders with current demographic data and detailed population projections that enable Georgia leaders to more effectively address issues and plan for the future.

In 2017, Hauer worked with the Georgia House of Representatives Rural Development Council to provide the demographic data they needed to make recommendations for potential legislation.

The 2018 Georgia Ag Forecast sessions will be held on the following dates at the following locations:

- Tuesday, Jan. 30: Lyons – Toombs County Agri-Center
- Thursday, Feb. 1: Bainbridge – Decatur County Agricultural Center
- Friday, Feb. 2: Tifton – Tifton Campus Conference Center

- Monday, Feb. 5: Macon – Georgia Farm Bureau Building
- Tuesday, Feb. 6: Cartersville – Clarence Brown Conference Center
- Wednesday, Feb. 7: Athens – The Classic Center

Individual seats are $35 per person and a table of eight is $240. All seminars begin at 9 a.m. and are followed by a networking lunch, except for the Tifton event which will open with a 7 a.m. breakfast, followed by the seminar.

The Georgia Ag Forecast seminar series is supported by the Georgia Department of Agriculture and Georgia Center of Innovation for Agribusiness.

Georgia Department of Agriculture ensures the quality of animal feed through sampling, inspections

The Georgia Department of Agriculture administers the rules and regulations related to animal feed through its Feed Program, housed under the Agricultural Inputs Section of the Plant Industry Division. This program is responsible for the licensing of feed manufacturers and consumer protection related to animal feed. Consumer protection is achieved through product sampling and four types of inspections: BSE, MFI, cGMP and VFD. Each type of inspection has specific rules and regulations, including:

- BSE (Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy or "Mad Cow Disease") is a type of transmissible spongiform encephalopathy (TSE) that affects cattle. TSEs are progressive and fatal neurodegenerative diseases. There are multiple TSEs which affect different species of animals including scrapie in sheep and chronic wasting disease (CWD) in deer. BSE inspections focus on determining if prohibited materials, such as meat-and-bone meal, are present, commingled, or have the potential to be commingled with ruminant feed. Regulations from the FDA under Rule 40-5-1-.02 have prohibited the inclusion of mammalian protein in feed for cattle and other ruminants and have also prohibited high-risk tissue materials in all animal feed. BSE presents a public health concern because occurrences of variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease (CJD) in humans have been linked to the consumption of food containing ingredients derived from BSE-infected cattle.
- MFI (Medicated Feed Mill Inspection) is a type of inspection conducted at feed mills manufacturing medicated animal feed. These facilities are required to obtain a license with the FDA. These licensed facilities are allowed to manufacture animal feeds from Category II, Type A medicated articles. The medicated feed mill licensee certifies that animal feeds bearing or containing animal drugs are manufactured and labeled in accordance with the applicable regulations and they will establish and maintain all records required. Medicated animal feeds are important tools for animal producers, but the feeds must be used correctly to ensure the safety of food produced by the animals. MFIs confirm that the added drugs have not reached their expiration date and that they are added at the correct dosage to feed. MFIs also confirm that feed is adequately labeled.

- cGMP refers to the Current Good Manufacturing Practice regulations enforced by the FDA. The cGMPs provide baseline safety and sanitation standards for the manufacturing, processing, packing, and holding of animal food. These cGMPs address general animal food safety and sanitation concerns and serve as a foundation for preventive controls. The cGMP inspections help facilities determine whether they comply with the cGMPs in Rule 40-5-1-.02 and provide additional information for compliance.
- VFD (Veterinary Feed Directive) is a rule outlining the process for authorizing the use of VFD drugs. Over the past several years, steps have been taken toward change in how medically important antibiotics can be legally used in feed or water for food-producing animals. The VFD inspection is comprised of a record review of VFD orders on file. A VFD order is a written statement issued by a licensed veterinarian that authorizes the use of a VFD drug or combination VFD drug in or on an animal feed. The written statement authorizes the client to obtain and use animal feed bearing or containing the VFD drug or combination VFD drug to treat a specific set of the client's animals.

The Feed Program also provides information for pet owners on what is inside your pet's food, how to safely handle your pet's food, and who to call if your pet is sick or if you have a pet food complaint.

Looking to start a pet food business? Find more information on our website about starting a pet food business, registration and license applications, and labeling requirements.

Check out the Feed Program website at <http://www.agr.georgia.gov/feed.aspx> to learn what to expect during inspections and for more information and helpful handouts and brochures for producers, manufacturers, transporters, veterinarians, consumers, and more.

Children contribute hand-made ornaments for Governor’s Mansion Christmas tree

By Kendall McWilliams
kendall.mcwilliams@agr.georgia.gov

A simple glass ornament adorned with blue, yellow and red ribbon hangs from a branch on a beautiful Fraser fir in the ballroom of the Georgia Governor’s Mansion. Jayden Bright, a child from Haralson County, submitted this ornament to First Lady Sandra Deal and her staff in hopes of bringing attention to autism, a disorder he has lived with from an early age.

Mrs. Deal is tasked with choosing the mansion’s theme of décor each Christmas. Last January, Mrs. Deal and her staff started generating ideas for this year’s theme – Celebrating Georgia’s Courthouses: Wisdom, Justice and Moderation – and planning an elaborate display of firs and spruces to fill the rooms of the executive residence. As a former educator, Mrs. Deal has vowed to utilize this annual opportunity to educate visitors to the mansion each holiday season. Each year, she dedicates a tree to the children of the state.

Jayden’s ornament hangs on this tree alongside ornaments submitted by children from all 159 counties of the state. The special invitation to submit allowed children throughout the state to showcase their creativity, capture the spirit of home, and highlight issues near and dear to their hearts.

“(Jayden) is a very sweet boy diagnosed with autism at a very young age,” Sandi Couch of the Haralson County Board of Commissioners wrote to the mansion staff. “He and his family were so excited and humbled that you all would dedicate a tree to the children of the state.”

The towering Fraser fir was donated by Weatherby Farms in Marietta.

“Tanya Weatherby has been such a faithful friend to the Governor’s Mansion,” said Mansion Director Joy Forth. “Next year will be her 25th year donating a Christmas tree to the Mansion. We are so grateful.”

Students from elementary school age to high school seniors used everything from cardboard paper towel rolls to hand-held 3D printers to create ornaments of all shapes and sizes. County officials chose the finalists and submitted their selections to the First Lady’s staff earlier this fall. Mrs. Deal explained that because of her background in education, she enjoys giving Georgia children to opportunity to be a part of the annual Christmas display.

“I just think it’s really special to have the children participate,” said Mrs. Deal. “Having been a teacher and a 4-H leader, I love all of this. It’s something they will always remember.”

In addition to Mrs. Deal’s request for hand-crafted ornaments from Georgia students, she also chose to pay tribute to the beauty of our state’s historic courthouses this holiday season, another vein for her educational expertise.

“We have to come up with a theme every year, and I figured with so many people that come through, it needs to be educational, not just entertaining,” Mrs. Deal said. “I can’t help but choose something educational.”

Mrs. Deal requested that each county submit an ornament that depicted their county courthouse. Each region of the state is represented by its own tree, and the courthouse ornaments hang alongside other decorative ornaments provided by counties in their respective regions.

“Using ornaments from each of the 159 counties in Georgia to decorate the Mansion is a charming way of showing pride in this great state that we live in,” wrote Houston County Board of Commissioners Chair Tommy Stalnakar.

In addition to the tribunal ornaments, several counties are represented in the Governor’s Mansion with papier-mâché models of their courthouses. Each model was specially and intricately made using various crafting materials to bring to life the true beauty Georgia’s historic courthouses.

Perhaps more interesting than the replicas themselves are the people who crafted them; incarcerated offenders built each model, and the replicas will be sold at auction for charity. All proceeds from the sale will be gifted to HeartBound ministries, a nonprofit outreach organization that supports programs within the prison community.

From Jayden’s simple glass ornament to the detailed courthouse models, the pride of the Georgia people from past to present is something that Mansion visitors will relish this Christmas season.

“This (house) belongs to the people. It doesn’t belong to me any more than it belongs to you,” said Mrs. Deal. “I think it’s important for children to understand that this is ‘The People’s House.’ They can grow up and live here, too.”

From the coastal plains of South Georgia to the northern mountain region, Georgia residents have a little piece of their home represented in “The People’s House” this holiday season.
